This course is recommended for those interested in pursuing a career in Community Development or Building Department as a Planner, Permit Technician, Building Inspector, Code Compliance Officer or Code Enforcement Personnel.

Public Works 098 – Sustainable Living and Green Building Programs

Section 30904

(1 Unit)

Mondays 6:00 to 10:15pm, April 26 – May 17, 2010 Room U-98

Prerequisite: none

Covers the 2008 California Energy Code and 2007 Green Building Standards Code for residential/non-residential projects. Provides background on several different energy-efficient programs such as “LEED”, “Build it Green” and “California Green Builder”. This crash-course will highlight the difference between these programs and identifies the pros and cons of each in the context of several projects. Current knowledge in energy-efficient building design provides a solid base for careers in building, construction and utilities (SCE, SCG) such as designers, architects, building inspectors, project managers, building energy modelers/consultants and contractors. This program is recommended for the general public as well as students and professionals interested in Sustainable/Green building design. This class will focus on the future Green economy.

Classes will be taught by experienced instructors who are also City of Orange Building Department managers/staff. College credit classes with CEU (continuing education units) available. No required text; handouts will be provided by the instructor. Pre-register with Santiago Canyon College online system (at www.sccollege.edu). Classes are $26 per unit plus other fees ($17 Health Fee, $30 parking fee per semester or $2 per day.) For further information, please contact instructor/City of Orange Chief Building Official, David Khorram at (949) 275-5070 or the SCC Career Education Division Office at (714) 628-4883.
